What should a woman never, ever fake?

Frank reality-issue opinions from six Glamour contributors

“A woman should never fake the size of her lips—lining outside your natural lip line looks unnatural. Small lips are better than fake lips!”

Bobbi Brown, who rails against plastic surgery in “Why Does Everyone Look So Fake?” page 276

“Your résumé: Lying about your experience will only come back to haunt you.”

Libby Callaway, who answers your urgent style questions in “Spring Fashion Dilemmas—Solved” page 138

“Don’t try to fake the fit of a bathing suit. Even if you have to try one on 50 times, make sure it looks good from every angle.”

Michael Kors, who writes his must-follow rules for sexy nights out in “Date Dressing Dos & Don’ts,” page 326

“Never fake love, because in the end, you are cheating yourself.”

Walter Chin, who photographed our models’ gravity-defying locks for “Your Real-Life Guide to Gorgeous Hair,” page 262

Jennifer Senior, who explains why growing up doesn’t mean growing old in “Are You Following Your Dreams?” page 212

“It’s OK to fake a tan or an occasional orgasm, but women should never fake contentment, commitment or integrity.”

Kristin Armstrong, ex-wife of Lance Armstrong, who reveals her love regrets in “What I Wish I Had Known About Marriage,” page 209
